BUTTE, Jan. 27.-Judge Pemberton and a jury devoted nearly all of their time to-day to the further hearing of the Chinese highbinder case; and the trial was as funny as a box of monkeys, and perhaps a little more so. The first witness this morning was a Mr. Simons, a carpenter, who had made a drawing of Chinatown and pointed out the spots of interest in the case. He was of the opinion that Chin, the fellow who was shot, could not possibly have seen, from the position where he was lying. John Elderkin, a law student in the office of Judge Hamilton, made an inspection of Chinese alley upon two different occasions, and testified to that effect.

tion of Chinese alley upon two different occasions, and testified to that effect.

"Who went with you the first time?" Mr. Hamilton asked the witness.

"Myself," was the answer.

"What other Chinaman?" continued the atterncy, and then everybody laughed.

Ah Loi, an intelligent Chinese merchant who is known to everybody as "Jim," was an interesting witness, and understood and spoke English well. He had known Chin in Butte and California for about 16 years and knew that his reputation was very bad. Ah Loi described Chinatown in detail, and said he was also well acquainted with Sing, the accused, and knew him to be a pretty decent Chinaman. In speaking of the prosecuting witness Ah Loi called him Fong Moi and County Attorney Baldwin wanted to know how many names Chin had anyway, and Loi proceeded to explain that in China Chin's family name was Quon and that to that was added Lun Chin. Some time in his life Chin was married, and then his name changed to Fong Moi, by which name everybody outside of his family had to address him, his father and mother and "Melicans" alone taking the privilege of using his original name. That was an unwritten law in China.

Ah Loi's statement interested the county attorney, and he pushed his questions along that line, and the witness said that Foo Sing got that name also after he had been married, and before that event

tions along that line, and the witness said that Foo Sing got that name also after he had been married, and before that event he went by some other name. "How do you happen to be so well ac-quianted with Chinese alley?" was the next question, and Loi replied that he often went through it on business, but that he selden went through there at night. he seldom went through there at night.
"Are you afraid to go through at

"Not if I have business there, but if I have no business there I stay out," was

He was asked if the alley was not composed mostly of sporting houses, and he replied that there were some there, but that there were also stores, Chinese doctors and homes there.

"What kind of a place does Sing live in?" ,'In his own home."

"Is he married?" "He told me so."

"But you didn't believe him?" "I believe anything he says."

lieve anything he says."
"How many other mines has be got?"

"How many other finnes has he got."
"Has he two, or three, or four." "I only know one."

The court at this point thought the questions were drifting in the direction of mere personal curiosity, and were not relative to the case, and they took another turn. Loi said he was a friend to both Foo Sing and Lan Chin, but cousin to neither.

Four Langed John, the proprietor of a Chinese gambling house, and with a face ugly enough to stop the court house clock, was the next witness. He relieved himself through an interpreter, and said he well remembered the night of the shooting, and contradicted Chin's statement as to his whereabouts just before the shooting. John said Chin was at his place during the night for the purpose of buying a lottery ticket. He did not know in what American year the shooting took place. American year the shooting took place, but could tell in what Chinese year it but could tell in what Chinese year it was.

The highbinder business was then touched upon, and the county attorney asked the witness whether he knew that Tom Lee had been a friend of Chin's. Tom Lee is the fellow who was maltreated in the joss house a few weeks ago because he was a friend to Chin and knew something about the shooting case. The highbinders have since driven him out of town. Mr. Hamilton objected to Baldwin's question, but when the latter explained that the object was to show that the defendant and his friends had intimidated the state's witnesses, he withdrew his objection, for he doubtless had had some insight into the foxy character of the heathen Chinee, and therefore felt safe. A dozen questions about the joss house episode only brought out the replies: "Don't know."

"Do you know anything about Tom Lee's cars being split by the highbinders in the joss house."

"Have you seen him since the ear-cutting fracas?"
"Don't know."

Lin Chang is the wife of Foo Sing, and testified that she was married to him in Los Angeles about two years ago, and has since been the only and lawful wife of the said Sing. She produced a certificate of marriage from a Los Angeles clergyman. Mr. R kiwin then entered an objection to the woman's testimony on the ground of incompetency as she was the wife of the defendant. The court immediately overruled the objection, and when the attorney started to argue the matter it remarked that "the court has already ruled on the question, and you can note an exception if you want to. There is too much time being wasted on this case."

Mrs. Sing then testified that her husband was in bed at the time of the alleged shooting, and that when the officer broke the door in she awoke her husband and told him there was a "bad man" at the door. On cross-examination she said she had known Sing for about three years, and that he did not import her from China. Mr. Baldwin wanted to know what her relations had been with the defendant before she married him, but Mr. Hamilton objected. The court ruled that the question might be asked but that Lin Chang could use her own pleasure about answering. When this was interpreted to her she aggravatingly refused to answer the question. She said she had been in Butte about two years.

"What kind of business have you been in since your residence in Butte." she was asked.

"Wife to my husband and doing some needle work," was the answer translated by the interpreter.

Mrs. Sing wore pants and was just as foxy as the male witnesses in dodging questions. At one time she said something Chin did not like, and he yelled a correction across the court room which riled the judge and he warned him against the procession.

He denied that he owed Chin any money or that he ever had any quarrels with him. On cross-examination he said he came to America from China about 10 years ago. Has no other wife in China and only the one here.

"Not pay much. She likee me and I likee her. We then marry."
When pressed upon the price of his wife Sing finally said he did not pay anything. He denied that he was indebted to Chin, but on the other hand had often loaned him money and never got it back. They never had any trouble over Lin Chang.

"Do you know Tom Lee?" "Know him when I see him on the street."
"Do you know that Tom Lee is a friend of Chin?" "I don't know, but they were always together."
Sing was then asked what he had to do with calling the meeting at the joss house for the purpose of amputating Tom Lee's ears, but he knew nothing about it and did not know what the meeting was held for.

"Are you a member of the highbinders?"
"No. I am a business man, and belong to a labor society."
Sing denied that he had anything to do

Judge Eddy was called in rebuttal to show that Quon Lun Chin had commenced suit in his court against Foo Sing for the recovery of money, and secured a judgment for a considerable sum. Mr. Hamilton objected on the ground that it was not proper cross-examination, and the objection was sustained.

The court then asked Mr. Grice if from his own knowledge he knew that the meeting had anything to do with the case, and if not, the testimony was not admissable. Mr. Grice then explained that he knew nothing except what he had been told, and also that Tom Lee had paid and retained him to prosecute Foo Sing. Tom Lee has since disappeared.

That closed the case and the attorneys then made their addresses to the jury, followed by the court's instructions.

The case was given to the jury at 5 o'clock and after several ballots had been taken, it was given out that it would be impossible to agree and at last reports the indications were that they would not.

At 12:30 to-night Judge Pemberton called the jury into the court room and upon the statement that they could not agree, discharged them. They stood 10 in favor of imposing a fine on the Chinaman, and two wanted to send him over the road. The defendant was released on a a $300 cash bond.

Their Arrest. BUTTE, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Henrietta Hartz appeared in Judge McMurphey's court this afternoon, and told a harrowing tale of cruelty on the part of three youths, as practiced against her grand-daughter, Anne Sterrit, a little girl of 10 years. Mrs. Hartz said that the girl was living with her at Burlington, which place is also the home of the persons of whom she com-

In her statement she said that the boys, whom she alleged were guilty of abusing the child, were 15 or 16 years old and almost daily submitted Annie to the most cruel and inhuman abuse, such as striking her, throwing stones at her and almost shaking her out of her clothes. This condition of affairs, Mrs. Hartz alleged, had been going on for months, and that the little girl was afraid of her life every time she was compelled to meet any or all of the boys. She farther said that she and her neighbors had repeatedly remonstrated with the parents of the youths against permitting them to continue their abuse of the girl, and instead of paying heed to these remonstrances, the parents had aided and abetted the boys in their acts of cruelty.

Recently the boys had grown so much worse, Mrs. Hartz said, that she was afraid they might do great bodily harm to the girl, and in consequence she asked the intervention of the court. Mrs. Hartz was referred to Assistant County Attorney Campbell, to whom she related her grieyance. Mr. Campbell considered that In her statement she said that the boys

Two of the complaints are against Frank, one charging him with assault and battery on Anne Sterrit, and the other with threatening to kill her. The complaint against John Arkensaw charges the accused with assault and battery on the girl. #### Roma Paxton Charged With Threatening to Kill J. C. Carter.

BUTTE, Jan. 27. Roma Paxton, a miner, entered a plea of not guilty in Judge Me Murphey's court to-day to a charge of having threatened to kill J. C. Carter. Paxton has been in the employ of Carter who is working the Manhattan mine, and the difficulty between them grew out of a matter of wages due Paxton. The latter was discharged and was given a check signed by Carter's son, payment of which was refused because it did not bear the Paxton denies that he made any threats against Carter whatever. He says he simply asked for the wages due him and Carter refused to meet the demand, and after telling him he would not give him another check left the house and went before Judge McMarphey and filed the complaint against him. Chief Leyden, who arrested Paxton, says he found him still sitting in Carter's house talking in a friendly manner to the younger Carter, and that as far as he could see the two were on good terms, a state of affairs, the chief thinks, that would not have existed had there been any trouble of a serious character between Paxton denies that he made any threats rouble of a serious character between Paxton and the elder Carter, Paxton says that his arrest is a part of a scheme by Carter to beat him out of his wages, He also says that it is impossible to attach a ny ore taken out of the mine, as no dump is allowed to accumulate at the shaft. As fast as anything is hoisted to the surface it is hauled away some distance and then sorted by hand. This statement is cor-roborated by others.

SENSATIONAL CASE

Trouble Among the Stockholders of the Miners' Lumber Company.

THOMPSON'S ALLEGATIONS

Charges the President of the Concern With Unlawfully Appropriating Its Funds.

BUTTE, Jan. 27.—A sensation of unusual proportions was sprung in business cir-cles to-day by Attorney Thompson Campbell, representing William M. Thompso filing a complaint in the district court against the Miners' Lumber company, and asking the court for the appointment of a receiver. It is the fifth legal action brought against M. J. Connell, president and treasurer of the company, by Mr. Thompson and he said to-day that it was not the last one. As soen as the present one is dis-posed of, it is said, another action will be brought that will be of a more startling brought that will be of a more starting nature. There is now a suit pending in the district court entitled "State, ex rel William Thompson, vs. M. J. Connell," for a penalty amounting to over $5,000. The new suit is commenced and based upon a detailed statement just furnished Mr. Thompson by Mr. Connell, upon an order of the court, and relating to the recourse and liabilities of the lumber company.

The complaint contains 25 separate and course and liabilities of the lumber company.

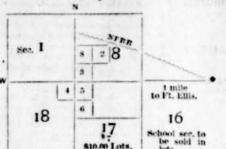

The complaint contains 25 separate and distinct allegations and some of them of a very sensational nature. In the first place, Mr. Thompson sets forth that he owns 159 shares of the capital stock of the immber company, and that the company was incorporated under the laws of the state. Ever since the 7th day of May, 1890, M. J. Connell has been, and is now, president and treasurer of the company, and has been the owner of some of the capital stock of the corporation. On the 6th day of May, 1890, at a meeting of the board of trustees, he was elected president, and at another meeting the day following, section 3 of the by-laws was amended to read: "At the same meeting the president shall act as treasurer exofficio." Mr. Thompson served upon Mr. Connell on May 9, 1890, a notice to furnish an accounting and on the 10th a meeting of the trustees was held and the by-laws changed, a copy of which was filed in the court with the complaint.

The ninth allegation is that Mr. Connell is, and long has been, president and treasurer of the Bonner Mercantile company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state. The planntiff is informed and believes and so charges the fact to be, that Frank Bien, George Raff and F. E. Shaw were then and now employed by the Bonner Mercantile company and under the control of and subject to the orders of M. J. Connell as president, manager, agent and treasurer of the same company. Mr. Thompson believes and charges that Bien, Raff and Shaw, while in the employ of the Bonner company, and under control of Connell, the latter caused one share of the capital stock of the Miners Lumber company, which was then standing in his Connell's) name, to be transferred to each of the three men, Bien, Raff and Shaw, and solely for the purpose and with the intent of Connell to cause them to be elected trustees of the three them to be elected trustees of the three three to company and have been such ever since.

In his thirthe basic and a meeting o elected trustees of the company and have been such ever since. In his thirteenth allegation Mr. Thomp-

upon issued a peremptory mandate, com-manding him to deliver to Thomp-son a statement under oath and in minute detail, of all the affairs of the company. The statement was furnished on Jan. 18 of this year, and showed that there should be in the hands showed that there should be in the hands of Mr. Connell as treasurer 869,555.82, but, as appears by the statement, there is but $468.29. The same statement shows that $46.716.95 is due and owing the company and representing the profits of the business, and is more than double the capital stock. This amount is in no way seemed stock. This amount is in no way secured and is not an available asset of the com-

In his thirteenth allegation Mr. Thompson says that he believes and charges that Bien, Raff and Shaw conspiring with Connell and under his control, and with him as trustee, caused a meeting of the trustees to be held solely for the purpose of amending the by-laws of the lumber company, in that the president of the company should be ex-officio treasurer thereof, and in furtherance of the design, and under the control of Connell, so changed and amended the by-laws as to give Connell by-laws as to give as president. absolute control of the money and securities, property, credit and other assets. The change in by-laws fur-ther limited the liability of Connell as president and ex-officio treasurer to the amount of money actually received by him, and non-liability for any increase of him, and non-liability for any increase of the funds in his hands, and the company not being entitled to any profits or increase which might arise from the use of the funds while in the hands of the president and treasurer. The president and treasurer was also given direct charge of all books and accounts of the company.

As such president and treasurer, says
the fourteenth allegation, Connell received large sums of money belonging to the lumber company and has appropriated and used, and is still using it to his personal and private benefit, and to the loss and damage of the company, and contrary to law. As president and treasurer, and

The loan was made without any security what-ever, as more fully appears by a statement under oath made by Connell himself as president and treasurer of the lumber company, and which was made part of the complaint. the complaint.

the complaint.

On or about Nov. 4, 1891, Connell, as treasurer of the lumber company and in the case where he was sued by Thompson, who demanded an accounting, filed under oath with his answer to the suit, a trial balance of the books of the company and kept by him as treasurer, the court there-The company through and by its board

The officers and trustees are failing and neglecting to collect the indebtedness due, or to secure it, and the trustees are still permitting and conniving with the treasurer to loan the money of the company to his own use and without security and without authority of money of the company to his own use and without security and without authority of law. Connell as treasurer is not required by the by-law, and has not executed a bond for the security of the company's funds, or for his liability, and is not liable any way for the profits arising from the use or investment of the company's money. The trial balance and the later statement under outh are wholly and entirely irreconcilable as to the affairs and money of the lumber company and if either one of the statements is true, then the books of the company are false. The trial balance shows that there are undivided profits in the hands of the treasurer, the sum of $53,185, which should have been divided among the stockholders, but it has never been done, while a statement of the treasurer shows that he has only $408,20 in his hands. No dividend has ever been declared, and the $58,185 has been appropriated by the treasurer to his own use and with the connivance of the board of trustees. The last allegation is, that for four years the company has failed and neglected to either publish in a newspaper or file for record the annual statement of the company under oath or otherwise, as required by law.

Judgment is asked, first, that the cor-poration defendant be decreed and dis-solved and that it has forfeited its cor-porate rights; second, that a receiver be appointed pending this action to take charge of all the estate and effects of the charge of all the estate and effects of the company and to collect the debts and property due and belonging to the com-pany and to sell and dispose of any property and to pay the outstanding in-debtedness and divide the money and property that shall remain over among the stockholders or members thereof.
